

Pueblo Head Start Classes Under Way

St. Joseph's Head Start program began its summer program last week after new instructors were found for one class of pre-school children. Leonard Pacheco, director of the Council of Mexican-American Affairs, said the program ended its first week of summer operation last week with about 12 students and two instructors. The teacher was placed on the job on Wednesday while the

Vision Care Center Set To Go Into Operation

A county-wide public service program in vision care for school children and youth has been inaugurated by the Optometric Vision Care Council according to Dr. Edwin L. Glover of San Pedro, president of the South Bay Optometric Society. Dr. Albert F. Kline of Torrance, is in charge of the program for this area. According to Dr. Glover this will be a year-long educational program including help in detecting vision handicaps that might hinder school progress. He says that over one-half million of California's elementary school students have undetected vision problems. Local optometric societies are offering free and informative programs with films and literature for parent associations, women's organizations, schools, and other groups. There will also be local vision screening projects when eyes of school children will be tested for possible undetected sight problems. Speakers or films are available by contacting Dr. Kline or the headquarters of the Optometric Vision Care Council, 2411 W. Ninth St., Los Angeles.

Scherich's School Using New Teaching Techniques

A new teaching technique, known as operant conditioning, is being used at Scherich's South Bay School to improve the amount of student advancement in class work. The program consists of behavior shaping and reinforcement of learning through immediate reward and continuous rewards to the student so that the desired behavior will become a part of the child. Children are rewarded for proper study habits, doing assignments, and working to the best of their abilities. The school's director, Warren Scherich, said that he found the program to be highly successful with older children. For example, Scherich related, one boy made nine months growth in reading and six months growth in arithmetic in only one month. Scherich plans to broaden the program to include younger children during the next year. The director said that he felt the results, under this method of instruction, would provide for a much happier child with greater academic improvement.

teacher's aid was on the job the previous Monday. There had been a delay of operation at the site after a dispute between instructors and Pacheco over the program's future three weeks ago. Two instructors were suspended by Pacheco. Also during the past month, Pacheco said he has attempted to get a mobile classroom for the site when the church will no longer be available after August 31. As of now, Pacheco said, there has been no notice that a room will be assured or where it will be located. He indicated that his request for a classroom had to be processed by the Economic Youth Opportunity Authority and that he did not know where the request was on a waiting list for the mobile units.

WELCOME TO LOMITA . . . Representatives of several service clubs in Lomita joined Mayor Joe A. Haslam (at right) this week to unveil new signs which will be posted at all entrances to the city of Lomita. At the unveiling of the first sign, located at 262nd Street and Narbonne Avenue, were (from left) Marvin Norfolk, past president of the Lomita Rotary Club; H. P. Osborne Jr., president of Kiwanis Club of Lomita; Cal Wisdom, president of the Harbor City-Lomita Lions; and Russell Fitzer, president of the Lomita Chamber of Commerce. The signs are the result of a joint project between the city's service clubs and the city council. (Press-Herald Photo)

and walked 10 to 15 feet away from it.

When the plane crashed he didn't even look. He ran to the nearest building—a bar—and it was some time before he was able to be quieted so patrons could find where he lived.

FOR ED PERRY, 30, of 6221 Kiowa Road, Westminster, the cash was just too much. It was the second plane crash he had witnessed in two days.

Sunday, the Misquito Abatement Control District worker was the first on the scene when a light craft crashed at Bellflower and Springs streets in Long Beach. It's occupants escaped uninjured and the plane didn't burn. "I pulled the people out of that one," he said. Monday he was spraying ditches nearby when the plane came down. He was too late to assist materially in the crash, he said. He drifted quietly and quite pale along the fringes of the crowd.

THE AIRPLANE, a Beechcraft Musketeer, was owned by Marion Trager, who leased it to Trager Aircraft Rental Co., of Torrance, who in turn rented it to Schilling, a veteran pilot who usually flew up to three times a week.

Trager said Schilling told him he was going to "take a short flight, maybe go to Van Nuys or something." He talked of going to Solvang, north of here, for the holiday, Trager reported.

He left Torrance Municipal Airport about 1:30 p.m. with 15 gallons of gas in each tank. A few minutes later he radioed the Torrance control tower to report his engine sputtering and he was attempting to switch to the other gas tank. His next transmission was garbled and not understandable. Then the crash.

MORE THAN 500 onlookers complicated rescue procedures when they lined Main Streets on both sides and clambered onto nearby rooftops unmindful of the hot wires as Sheriff's deputies also struggled to close the area to traffic to Edison Co. crews could lift the hot wires off the ground.

Power also had to be restored immediately to the County Sanitation Sewage Plant at 24501 S. Figueroa St., Carson, when sewage began backing up, threatening to spill sewage into nearby neighborhood streets.

M. E. Manning, Edison Co. Regional Supervisor, reported most power completely back on in the square mile area by 9 p.m.

Area Welfare Council Elects New President

A Rolling Hills woman has been named president of the Harbor Area Welfare Planning Council. She is Mrs. J. Carroll Monfort of 26969 Eastvale Road. Other officers selected by a nominating committee and approved unanimously by the Council's board of directors include Dr. Milo Milfs, California State College at Dominguez Hills, first vice president; and Mrs. Larry Hancock, secretary-treasurer.

MRS. MONFORT, co-owner of Lunada Hardware Store in Palos Verdes Estates, has been active on the Planning Council for several years. Her other memberships and offices include vice president of the Neighborhood Youth Association, chairman of the Harbor Area Committee of the NYA, board member of the Harbor Area United Way, and past president of the Welfare Information Service. She replaces Dr. Walter Nowers of Torrance as president.

THE PLANNING Council is responsible for the development of improvements in public and private services in the areas of community relations, education, health and welfare. The Harbor Council serves Torrance, San Pedro, the Palos Verdes Peninsula, Gardena, Wilmington, Carson, and Dominguez.
